

We Are Watching a Greta Thunberg

3/2/2023

by Noel Joshua Hadley

HOW many magazine covers was this girl on, exactly? In 2019 you couldn't escape the checkout stand without passing her mug on the rack. I'm counting nine already, though there are others. One for every month is my best guess. Since when did nearly every outlet for the Military-industrial complex find interest in slapping the self-righteous and angry glare of a baby-faced teenager from Sweden onto their cover? Greta Thunberg may be sugar and spice and everything nice, depending upon how you serve your memes, but she is also a Media creation. An intentional and deliberate fabrication. She is a show business actor deriving from actor parents and you would have to be blind to not see what's going on.

Check out this report by The Daily Caller if you don't believe me. They released it in November of 2019. Breaking the story on Greta Thunberg was only a matter of time though. If not them, it would have been somebody else. Look, you can't force feed every American at the Newspaper stand and tell them to say aah, pausing only to wipe their mouth with a bib, without somebody asking the agenda question. FYI, I don't care how you feel about their politics over at The Daily Caller. Prove them wrong.

I dropped you a link but here is the short of it. In the spring of 2019, over 250 Media outlets and journalists partnered with Columbia University to shape control of "climate crisis" coverage in the lead up to the United Nations climate conference. Among those who attended were BuzzFeed

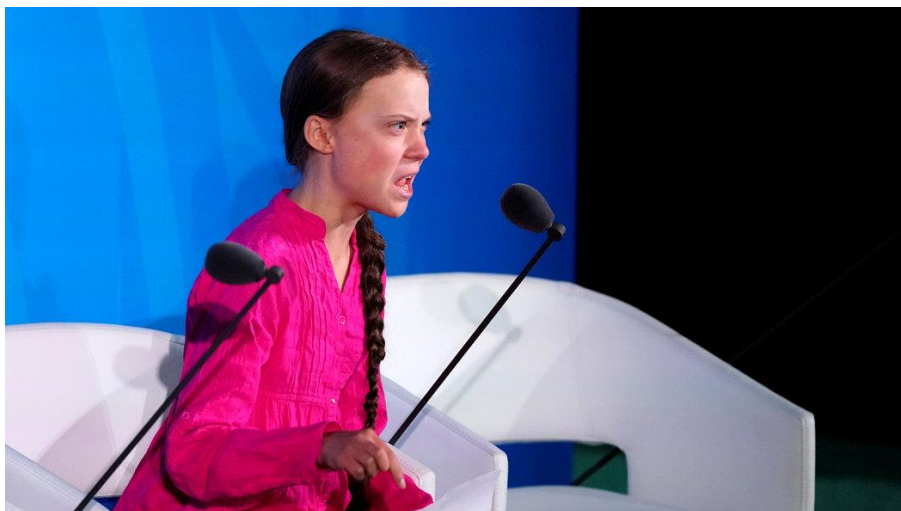

News, HuffPost, The Daily Beast, Newsweek, Rolling Stone, Slate, Vanity Fair, CBS, and Bloomberg. That's what you might call a conspiracy, right there. FYI, Columbia has been a hotbed for CIA recruiting and activity since the very formation of their agency, but let's not get sidetracked by the obvious. The result of their pow-wow is that Greta Thunberg showed up at New York harbor in a 60-foot racing yacht and the rest is history.

The first thing we ought to do I suppose is meet the parents. Svante Thunberg and Malena Ernman. It only takes a few seconds of digging to learn that he's listed on IMDb as an actor. There's your first tip-off. But not only that, Svante's parents are Olof Thunberg and Mona Andersson, also actors with IMDb and IMDb pages of their own. EDIT: How fun, Greta [does too.] What that tells you is that Greta derives from a family of actors and the apple doesn't fall far from the tree though I haven't even touched upon her mother yet.

Malena Ernman is an opera singer and a member of The Royal Swedish Academy of Music. Most notably, she represented Sweden at the 2009 Eurovision Song Contest in Moscow, when little Greta was only six years old. I'm dropping a link to her performance, though for some of you, the photo replete with one-eyed symbolism will suffice. That was the first photo that I pulled up, by the way. It is clearly obvious that the Thunberg's have a hankering for the spotlight. The Media needed a role cast and in the game of identity politics the little Swedish girl was the perfect choice.

Her mother Malena Ernman has a claim to fame of her own: she's a Swedish opera singer. And for Thunberg, having a celebrity for a mom only prepared her for her time in the spotlight.

"That's one of the pros of having a famous mother," Thunberg told The New York Times of her mom in February. "I'm quite familiar with the media and how it works."

I stumbled upon a fact checking website a few moments ago which claimed Greta Thunberg is not an actor, LOL. Apparently, they have never heard of performance activism. Tell me again how Greta's emotionally drenched speech at the United Nations conference doesn't stink of one. How dare you!? In one decisive moment, Columbia University got what they paid for. It's not like Greta was hiding her inspiration. Greta told The New York Times that her celebrity mother "prepared her for her time in the spotlight,” adding, “I’m quite familiar with the media and how it works.” Say it ain’t so.

And there it is. I spy old One-Eyed Willie assaulting us from the magazine rack again. The humorous part is that there are at least two of them. Only one landed on the cover but both are from the same photo session, and it is quite clear what look they were going for. A little last-minute improvisation is my best guess, perhaps on the part of her handler. Greta certainly wasn't kidding when claiming the Eurovision opera singer had prepared her for the spotlight. Like mother like daughter, indeed. And on the cover for i-D no less. Get it? Greta Thunberg had found her identity in the spotlight of identity politics. Yes, I too get jokes. She even sold her soul for a slice of the pie, but we're not supposed to read from the ingredients label these days.

Well, that’s lovely. The one-eyed narrative went dark in a hurry. Can’t say they weren’t being creative this time around. They definitely captured her good side if I do say so myself. Seems like we’re getting more into character with each photo-shoot. I’ve always been partial to Greta Thunberg in pigtails and a yellow hooded rain jacket, but I might be able to get used to this.

Of course, othing says, “climate crisis” and being in the know quite like the shadow of a flower covering one’s eye. So creative! How long do you think it took them to nail this one, especially if there was a breeze? What a shame that it didn’t land a magazine cover.

What’s the matter, Greta? Looks like you’ve got something in your eye. That can be painful. And in a cartoon of all places. I would recommend a wet towel and warm water. Remember, it’s important to wipe away from the face rather than in tiny circles so that the debris doesn’t get stuck under the eyelid. And now I’m curious, how do you suppose the instructions went down for the cover illustrator with this one? “We’re going for the Illuminati look. It’s all the rage these days with the kids, you know.” I got you, wink-wink.

Storyline

 Edit

In August of 2018, Greta Thunberg, a 15-year-old student in Sweden starts a school strike for the climate. Her question for adults: if you don't care about her future on earth, why should she care about her future in school? Within months, her strike evolves into a global movement. Greta, a quiet Northern-European girl on the autism spectrum is now a world famous activist. The team behind Greta has been following the young activist from her very first day of school striking.

The movie she starred in is no less factitious than the media blitz of her North American tour, obviously. Just look at the plot. Try not to laugh when I tell you it centers upon a young autistic high school sophomore on her road to global stardom.

Adorable. So convenient that she happened to have two movie producers and a camera crew in her possession. Production began as early as August of 2018 when she was but 15, but then what sort of girl even shows up on the first day of class with a director? She then proclaimed she was ending her career as a student since her teachers didn't care about her future on earth. Yeah, I'm sure none of that was scripted whatsoever. I'm sure the part about her sitting alone in the cafeteria because nobody but the earth wanted to be her friend or having to sit by her lonesome on the street while the camera crew films her was in no way GMO'd. Columbine is looking way more legit by this point.

Oh, and did I fail to mention that Malena Ernman even released a book? The story I am told once again revolves around climate activist Greta Thunberg as an 11-year-old, but this time she isn't eating or speaking. Desperate and searching for answers, her parents eventually discover the heart of Greta's distress: her imperiled future on a rapidly heating planet. Oh dear. If only she'd talked and told them her problems, perhaps they could have figured this out sooner. That or they never should have let her stay up late watching that Al Gore documentary. 'Scenes from the Heart', or 'Scener ur hjärtat' as it was known in Swedish, was released on August 23, 2018, the very month that production began on Greta's movie. Man, I knew this psyop was the manufactured baby of the Military-industrial complex but I didn't have the slightest clue it was pieced together on an assembly line until now.

Greta's decision to leave school paid off it seems because she even got to meet Pope Francis at the Vatican. Well, that doesn't happen every day. I didn't see that one coming. So jealous. I will admit this isn't your typical drop out of school plotline, as scripted storylines go. I'm sure they totally coldcocked the Pope though. Yes, that sounds about right. I'm sure he had absolutely no clue that he was part of a global warming propaganda movie.

Greta's trip to America was a two-week voyage on board a 60-foot racing yacht with an estimated construction cost of 4 million Euros. We are not told how she or anyone in her family paid for it, and even the company has stated that it had not received any additional funding for the cross Atlantic voyage. How she ended up being skippered across the pond so as to avoid leaving behind a carbon footprint is anybody's guess. Her boat captain was somebody named Pierre Casiraghi. It's a good thing I decided to look into this Casiraghi fellow, because you never really know where the spooks will crop up. Turns out, he's the grandson of Monaco's Prince Ranier III and actress Grace Kelly.

Greta's 2019 Global Warming Tour ended with TIME handing her their Person of the Year award. Which is to say, she managed to land on another magazine cover. I would say that's a bit of an overkill but it's more like whoop-de-doo by this point. There were of course varied complaints among the social media normies, many of whom called her undeserving of such an honor, but I disagree. To say she was undeserving is to completely miss the fact that we're watching a movie. Greta Thunberg isn't simply some random fabrication in the propaganda game. No, she's just one actor among many and the psyop is an ongoing one. I'm actually a little surprised that they didn't hand her a Pulitzer. They named her Person of the Year for one simple reason. Because handing her an Academy Award would have been too obvious.

[3/3/2023 UPDATE: THE issue of course is over her latest arrest. If the fact checkers have been riding Greta Thunberg's coattails again, it's because nearly anyone and everyone who's even remotely aware of the movie theater that we're sitting in is still reeling from the last staged performance involving the angry self-righteous pubescent Swede. She's a woman now, you know. The kids grow up fast, don't they? I would say Columbia University's Media narrative totally sucked balls but after three years of the Covid psychodrama those magazine covers with Greta already feel like good times.

Really, you would think we'd all be doing the Corporate News a favor in telling everyone her latest episode is staged, seeing as how she's supposedly going up against The Man and all of that. But nope, they rush to defend her. What does that tell you? My hours are extremely limited, and so, I've come to learn as a general rule that it's a good idea to pay attention to the inconvenient facts. Those are the ones which the official narrative snipes with a silencer. The journalists have had their chance and I ain't got no time to sit around for their spoon feeding. Best to chuck their dribble in the dumpster and add another twenty minutes to your day.

We were told that her January 17 protest and arrest in Luetzerath, Germany was in regard to the demolition of a village intended to make way for a coal mine expansion. Man, Greta has started to take a dark turn.

Blame three years of Covid, I guess. But before we get too far into it there's something you should know.

Rep. Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez ✓
@RepAOC

Today, Rep. AOC was arrested along with other members of Congress outside the Supreme Court for protesting in support of abortion rights.

#AbortionRightsAreHumanRights

In America we can spot a fake arrest when we see one. And so, I give you Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez. On July 19, the overturn of Roe v. Wade coincided with the arrest of 17 members of Congress, and it was staged. Fact-checkers as you can imagine were called into overtime. Because of the normies, you see. AOC doesn't have all her cups in the cupboard and too many of them are becoming alert to the movie theater.

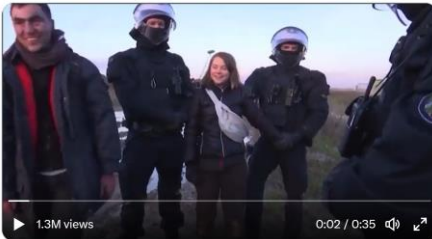

Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez ✓
@AOC

No faking here. Putting your hands behind your back is a best practice while detained, handcuffed or not, to avoid escalating charges like resisting arrest.

On the following day, AOC backpedaled, claiming she was being detained rather than arrested and that she had put her hands behind her back so as to avoid escalating charges like resisting arrest. Mm-hmm, that must be it.

Never mind that the arrest rumor had been put out by her own office and Twitter account. There were even cops in the replies saying you only put your hands behind your back if you're told to, and they only tell you to if they're going to cuff you. Hmmm, seems like AOC hadn't done her homework and the buttons called her out on it. Cleaning up Liberal BS is not part of their job description. My guess is she went off script because the Media threw her under the bus as well. Gotta love these improv actors, LOL.

The problem with writing a paper such as this one is that I'm not a movie projector. If you want to watch behind the scenes footage of Greta's arrest then I will redirect you right back to its source on Twitter, and what do we see? Greta is laughing it up with her police captors. Cracking jokes about the environment, I shouldn't wonder. It is only a 35 second video. I have taken screenshots for your convenience to show what happens at about the halfway mark. Greta's acting skills are about as varied as shake n' bake, which is to say, she manages to harness the inner nihilism of Mother Earth for the Media photographer, as well as her stolen youth on a multi-million dollar racing yacht and all that, and the police help with her performance. Just as painful is having to watch the normies "use logic" in the replies, claiming the police are nicer in Deutschland and that's something which Americans wouldn't know about. Right.

The bigger problem as I see it is that Greta is a liability moving forward. She is an actor but has already been cast into a lifetime role which cannot be undone unless she is reassigned. Our Media Controllers publicized their product to the point of overkill on the last go-around. You can't untoast the toast. She will be an asset and an insurance policy to anyone who takes these issues seriously.]

"A top climate scientist is warning that climate change will wipe out all of humanity unless we stop using fossil fuels over the next five years."

Jun 21, 2018

[6/22/2023 UPDATE: GRETA Thunberg. Remember her? Hard to forget. Greta Thunberg, the gift that just keeps on giving. Looks like everybody's favorite Swede deleted a Tweet from 6/21/2018, but not before some of us were able to file it away with our other hundred-thousand memes. Between this and Building 7, the Internet never really forgets, Greta. Speaking of which, here is what TIME Magazine's Person of the Year had to say:

A top climate scientist is warning that climate change will wipe out all of humanity unless we stop using fossil fuels over the next five years.

Jun 21, 2018

Well, that's odd. I just finished typing out Thunberg's Tweet, being meticulous to transcribe every word properly, and then looked out my window. A person passed by, walking her dog. Seems as though humanity is still thriving by my account, even though yesterday was marked on the calendar by the people in Lab Coats as the last day on earth, but maybe I'm overthinking things. In case you didn't notice, the date of this update is 6/22/2023. Precisely five years and one day have passed since Greta's dire warning. It is a Thursday. The end of the world was scheduled for a Wednesday. How much more of this dribble must we endure?

• This article is more than 19 years old

Now the Pentagon tells Bush: climate change will destroy us

- Secret report warns of rioting and nuclear war
- Britain will be 'Siberian' in less than 20 years
- Threat to the world is greater than terrorism

A secret report, suppressed by US defence chiefs and obtained by The Observer, warns that major European cities will be sunk beneath rising seas as Britain is plunged into a 'Siberian' climate by 2020. Nuclear conflict, mega-droughts, famine and widespread rioting will erupt across the world.

The document predicts that abrupt climate change could bring the planet to the edge of anarchy as countries develop a nuclear threat to defend and secure dwindling food, water and energy supplies. The threat to global stability vastly eclipses that of terrorism, say the few experts privy to its contents.

Seeing as how Greta was born in 2003, I'll go out on a limb and claim she was still snug in her soggies when The Guardian released this lovely little spirited piece of propaganda garbage. Though really, her potty-training schedule is anybody's best guess. The date of the article is 2/21/2004, and in it we come to learn that the Bush Administration has been suppressing knowledge that comes to us from the Pentagon, LOL. In the report, exclusively obtained by The Observer, major European cities were expected to sink beneath the ocean whereas Britain would be plunged into a Siberian climate, all of which was expected to happen by 2020. Oh dear. Obviously, the Pentagon doesn't know when to quit because, keep reading, there is no end to the milking of the Nuclear Option tit. The claim that the Pentagon actually manages to get right is the widespread rioting. We've had plenty of that from the psychotic liberals. It is by no coincidence that your typical run-of-the-mill Arby's arsonist is gullible enough to believe the psyop.

Never mind the Magnum P.I. home that the Obama's bought for $9 million in 2015 only to raze it to the ground. But then Al Gore of all people. He spent something like $9 million on his own Ocean view Villa. And then there is the $12 million house in Martha's Vineyard that the Obama's began building in 2020. They are serial offenders of the global warming fantasy. I mean, doesn't it seem odd to you to purchase beachfront property, knowing what is coming, when something with a little more height, like say, Aspen, Colorado or Park City, Utah, is looking, oh, I don't know, more dry at this point in history?
