

The Osama bin Laden Hoax

AND then one day in September of 2001, Osama bin Laden set down his copy of ‘1984’ long enough to gaze up at the News flickering upon the television screen and quip, “What the alijahim?”

That’s hell in Arabic in case you were wondering. Being blamed for an attack upon the Pentagon with an airliner that mysteriously evaporated, that big hole in the farmers field in Pennsylvania, also evaporated, along with the people and the luggage, and then the collapse of the World Trade Center but not building 7 probably deserves a much greater reaction. What I’m trying to say is that he didn’t do it. The United States created a fictional character out of a living person. He never stood trial but claimed his innocence. Osama bin Laden was a patsy.

It didn’t start out that way though. In an earlier decade, bin Laden was the CIA’s contact man in the Mujahideen when the Russians invaded Afghanistan. Back then he went by another name—a code name, really. Tim Osman. Just so that there is no confusion, Osman and bin Laden are the same person. But then it was decided that Mr. Osman was anti-CIA. That’s a problem for the Clinton’s and the Bush’s and everyone else who subscribes to Establishment thinking, you know. Osman-Osama knew too much, which made him dangerous. Best to turn the propaganda against him. And seeing as how 9/11 was already decades in the making, clearly, why not blame the man from Afghanistan? I'm telling you this now so that there will be very few if any surprises later.

Emmanuel Goldstein is a fictional character in George Orwell's 1949 dystopian novel Nineteen Eighty-Four. He is the principal enemy of the state according to the Party of the totalitarian Oceania. He is depicted as the head of a mysterious and possibly fictitious dissident organization called "The Brotherhood" and as having written the book The Theory and Practice of Oligarchical Collectivism. He is only seen and heard on telescreen, and may be a fabrication of the Ministry of Truth, the State's propaganda department.

Speaking of 1984, agent Orwell's novel has an enemy-of-the-State going by the name of Emmanuel Goldstein. He's depicted as fictitious too. A dissident whose head is only ever seen and heard on telescreen but who, in all likelihood, is a fabrication of the Ministry of Truth and may already be dead, if he ever lived to begin with. Well, well, well. Goldstein seems to fit bin Laden's description nicely, don't he? By the by, Goldstein is a Jooish name, telling us who he is ultimately working for.

The same scenario plays out in the Robert Downey Jr. movie, 'Iron Man 3'. The villain this time around is comic book favorite the Mandarin, but with a twist. After a string of bombings claimed by the terrorist has left intelligence agencies bewildered by a lack of forensic evidence, Tony Stark, aka Iron Man, traces the Mandarin to Miami of all places. It is there where he discovers that the Mandarin is actually an English actor named Trevor Slattery, working for the Intel community while remaining oblivious to the actions carried out in his image.

The movie was released in May of 2013, two years to the month of Osama bin Laden's reported death. They just can't help themselves, slapping us in the face with this stuff. The defining difference however between the Mandarin and bin Laden is that Trevor Slattery was arrested and put to trial, being furthermore pleased with the Media attention, whereas Osama was fed to the fishes. It's the little differences. Intel is telling us that any true conspiracy would have been brought to the light, had Osama attempted to pull a Mandarin on us. But are you buying what they're stocking the shelves with? I'm not.

Another thing which seems certain is that Osama Bin Laden was dead before the year was out. We'll get to that. The Government strung everybody along for nearly a decade, but that was for the purposes of installing fear within us. Also, there was a presidential reelection needing tended to and, within another few years, an adrenaline boost in the polling charts. As you well know by now, it's all psychodrama.

THE PART where they tell us Osama bin Laden was killed in Pakistan by Navy Seals in 2011 was the plot to a Hollywood movie and has no correlation with reality. The real Osama most likely died due to complications resulting from kidney and liver failure sometime in December of 2001, but even his demise may be purposefully planted misinformation. For all I know, Osama bin Laden was already long gone before 9/11. A grave marker is an excellent starting point for creating a fictional character. Dead men tell no tales.

Others have speculated that he died among America's first bombing raids. The simple logic behind this is that Intel knew where he was at all times. You'll see for yourself soon enough that the CIA was speaking openly with him in the days leading up to the event. I'm mostly indifferent as to his fate. The underlying narrative which the Pentagon labored to scrub however involves a death by way of kidney and liver failure, and so, it's the one I'm going with. Yes, that too may be invented. But you know what else was fabricated? The Osama tapes.

Either way, Osama bin Laden had to be offed sooner rather than later. The leader of Al-Qaeda was too dangerous left alive, but not because of his uncanny ability to demolish three buildings with two airliners. No, the real Osama bin Laden was attempting to turn the tables and expose everything. Our storytellers couldn't have that. Then again, the world is a stage. He may have been dancing the jig with Princess Diana by the end of the year—in the hoaxer hideaway. But let's not get distracted.

March 16, 2000 - Suspected terrorist Osama bin Laden reportedly is dying of kidney disease.

Bin Laden, 45, is suspected of masterminding the deadly 1998 bombings of two American embassies in Africa - which killed 224 people, including 12 Americans - and is believed to be hiding in Afghanistan.

The Hong Kong-based magazine Asiaweek reports kidney disease is starting to affect bin Laden's liver. It also says a close associate is trying to get a dialysis machine to help him.

CBS News may have been the first to report openly on bin Laden's condition—at least, in western Media. I'm not saying there aren't others. It's simply the earliest that I've read. As you can see with the headline, the suspected terrorist was reportedly dying of kidney disease. They base their claim on a Hong Kong magazine, but I'm not buying it. More than likely, CBS was shifting blame away from their CIA connections.

The weekly news magazine, quoting "a Western intelligence source who has been tracking him," said the Saudi Arabian millionaire remains mostly conscious and is able to talk and hold meetings.

The kidney disease reportedly had begun to affect bin Laden's liver and associates were trying to obtain a dialysis machine to stabilize his condition. But "the man is dying," Asiaweek quoted the source as saying.

A line or two down in the same article we discover how "a Western intelligence source" was tracking him. See what I mean? How nice of the CIA to report their findings to Asiaweek rather than western media.

Several days later, the Chicago Tribune picked up the same story. Tim Osman was reportedly suffering from a kidney and liver failure. The Tribune doesn't even shift responsibility to Hong Kong this time around. A straightforward reading has the Tribune being gifted with a "Western intelligence official" reporting to them. Wink-wink. The Media is the propaganda wing of the Military-Industrial complex, but let's not get sidetracked with my hang-ups. Continuing.

In July of 2001, the French Newspaper LE FIGARO not only had Bin Laden receiving treatment for his liver and kidney trouble; they placed him in Dubai, and in American hospital of all places. Here is what we read.

“Dubai, one of the seven emirates of the United Arab Emirates federation, is northeast of Abu Dhabi. This city of 350,000 inhabitants was the discreet stage for a secret meeting between Osama bin Laden and the local CIA representative, in July. A man, a professional partner of the administrative management of the American hospital of Dubai, affirms that public enemy number one stayed in this hospital from July 4-14.”

Rather awkward, don't you think? With only 2 months to go before showtime too. Why not apprehend him right then and there... on the stage? He was a suspected terrorist. It wasn't simply one American embassy he was blamed for bombing. There were two of them on the same day. 224 people killed including 12 Americans. The FBI had already issued a warrant for the arrest of Osama bin Laden as early as 1998, and in six countries. It's not like the CIA even needed to trail him, either. Brits and Americans were reporting bin Laden's location to American embassies and the FBI in the years to follow, but with no response. He was right out in the open, planting his bum in an office building. And in 2001, Osama was down for the count for ten entire days following a major surgery. He wasn't going anywhere. Nobody stopped him. He even left in a private jet. It was all a farce.

Independent reports from Islamabad and Peshawar suggest that :

* Bin Laden, who suffers from renal deficiency, has been periodically undergoing dialysis in a Peshawar military hospital with the knowledge and approval of the Inter-Services Intelligence, (ISI) if not of Gen.Pervez Musharraf himself.

It's not like he went bouncing out of there in a pair of flats either. Within weeks, the South Asia Analysis Group reported Bin Laden's arrival in a Peshawar military hospital, which came with the knowledge and approval of the Inter Services Intelligence. The guy was barely clinging onto life. Feeding his condition openly among the press may have been a way for spooks to spread concern as to their upcoming demolition. There were only two months to go. They probably needed to keep their foreman alive just long enough to wreak havoc at the construction site. Then let him die.

We've been told that, that in 1998--this is after you left--but we've been told that in 1998, DEA agents in Pakistan had developed their own network of informants into Afghanistan. Of course, the Nairobi bombing had taken place. And they had discovered that Osama bin Laden has a kidney problem, is on dialysis, that his doctor was in Peshawar, and that they had the ability, possibly, to poison his dialysis treatment, but that their proposal to do so was rejected when it was sent through the embassy to CIA, because of the ban on assassinations.

In a mid-September 2001 interview with Jeffrey H. Smith, former general counsel of the CIA from 1995 to 1996, PBS FRONTLINE let it slip that DEA agents in Pakistan had reported upon bin Laden's kidney problems as early as 1998. His doctor was even known as residing in Peshawar. Try not to laugh when they tell you the CIA was prompted to poison his dialysis treatment but declined due to a ban on assassinations and because of their own personal integrity. Right. A November 2001 article in The Guardian ups the body count of his Dubai hospital visitors to not only include the CIA but also Saudi personalities and several family members. So much for being the black sheep of the family.

Within ~~weeks~~ days of 9/11, the ‘Osama did it’ propoganda was already bursting at the seams. So much ignorance on display—where to even begin? I’ve given you a few examples. New Yorkers had already begun passing out “Wanted DEAD NOT ALIVE” fliers as early as September 13—before the dust even had time to settle. In our next photo, a woman decides to beat a burning effigy of Osama with her shoe. Getting things done in India, I suppose. And then we see evidence of spooks posing as street artists. That, or gangs got patriotic in a hurry. Hard to tell. And finally, there’s a man from Miami using Osama’s head for target practice. Let’s not bother him, he’s helping the investigation.

As you can imagine, Osama’s own personal 1984 unraveled in a hurry during the days and weeks following his 9/11 framing. It was on September 17, 2001, that George W. officially declared bin Laden the ringleader of the September 11 attacks. By October 1, Britain’s Prime Minister Tony Blair stated: “I have seen absolutely powerful and incontrovertible evidence of his link to the events of the 11th of September.” The statement was presumed related to the UK government’s “bin Laden dossier,” which appeared three days later, another mere three days before bombing in Afghanistan began, and contained no credible evidence whatsoever. But I’m already getting ahead of myself, because on September 22, only a few days after Bush declared him public enemy no. 1, Osama told the Pakistani newspaper Ummat:

I was not involved in the September 11 attacks in the United States, nor did I have knowledge of the attacks. There exists a government within a government within the United States. The United States should try to trace the perpetrators of these attacks within itself; to the people who want to make the present century a century of conflict between Islam and Christianity.

That secret government must be asked as to who carried out the attacks... The American system is totally in the control of the Jews, whose first priority is Israel, not the United States... I have already said that we are not hostile to the United States. We are against the system, which makes other nations slaves of the United States, or forces them to mortgage their political and economic freedom.”

Hard to argue against Osama’s claim when in fact everything he stated here is true. If you’re first reaction is to say “Nuh-uh,” then you’ve got some reading to do. Get to it. Chop-chop. Do I need to spell the toxicity of his message out for you? Osama went from declaring his innocence to explaining precisely why the Corporate Government was framing him for their own acts of terror. He knew too much about how the world worked, and that made him dangerous, given his position. Really, Osama could have claimed so much more about our own slavery rather than his own. All he offers us here is a crash course into the lies and deception that makes up our Construct, but it is quite enough as it is to land him in a heap of trouble. Unfortunately for most though, his message came too late in the game. It truly is difficult to listen when stars and stripes are gushing from one’s eyes.

Even more awkward than the truthfulness behind bin Laden's message is his reported death in December of 2001. You already know the cause. It boiled down to an untreated lung complication from kidney disease. The NY Times and Fox News even managed to report on it. Accordingly, the Taliban numbered about 30 "close associates" who attended his funeral at an unmarked grave in the Tora Bora region of Afghanistan. It's not like it wasn't well publicized in the middle east either. News regarding his death was pronounced in Cairo. Seems like nearly everybody knew about it, that is, except for westerners. So, imagine everyone's surprise in Afghanistan and Iraq when the United States ~~filmed in a movie studio~~ surfaced with the latest Al Qaeda video. Osama bin Laden, it seems, had risen from the dead.

Not to get sidetracked here, but there is a movie which came out several years after the 9/11 inside job, and it's worth noting. 'The Curious Case of Benjamin Button' arrived in 2008, telling the story of a man who ages in reverse order. It was based upon the short story by F. Scott Fitzgerald, but I am inclined to think the life and times of Osama was too. Throughout his various videos, the man from Afghanistan just keeps getting younger and younger. How did he manage to do it? The George W. and Barrack Obama administrations never kiss and tell. Such a shame. For the remainder of this paper, we shall have to be content figuring out that mystery for ourselves.

As I was saying, The Government managed to nab their very own copy of the latest Osama bin Laden tape after U.S. forces raided a house in Afghanistan and happened to see it laying around. How do you suspect they were tipped off? Did someone rent a copy from the newest release section at their local Blockbuster and a CIA agent followed them home? If the video cassette was ejected from the VCR and its owners were not kind enough to rewind, we are not told. But anyways, The Government was thoughtful of our propaganda needs and decided to release an English version. I'm slightly disappointed that they didn't dub in Dick Cheney to record Osama's lines, but it is what it is.

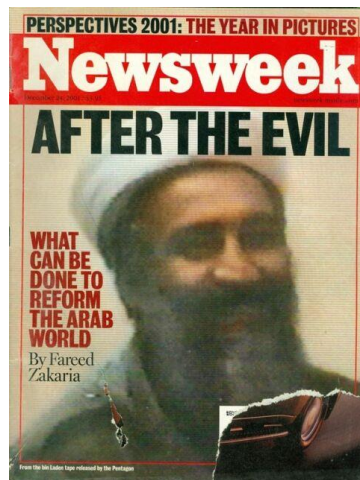

In this one, Osama is speaking with someone who is identified for us as Khaled al-Harbi, as well as other associates. Their apparent location is Afghanistan, soon before the U.S. invasion had driven the Taliban regime from Kandahar. FYI, it is a confession to his crimes. Osama just couldn't keep it to himself anymore. He was tired of the denials and the lies. Tony Blair and the Bush brothers were right about everything, and the weight of what he'd done was too much to bear. Read the transcript for yourself.

“We calculated in advance the number of casualties from the enemy, who would be killed based on the position of the tower. We calculated that the floors that would be hit would be three or four floors. I was the most optimistic of them all... We had notification since the previous Thursday that the event would take place that day. We had finished our work that day and had the radio on.... Muhammad (Atta) from the Egyptian family (meaning the Al Qaida Egyptian group), was in charge of the group.... The brothers, who conducted the operation, all they knew was that they have a martyrdom operation and we asked each of them to go to America, but they didn't know anything about the operation, not even one letter. But they were trained, and we did not reveal the operation to them until they are there and just before they boarded the planes.”

Amazing. It's almost as though Osama were spouting off the White House narrative like a teleprompter script or something, and only slightly more believable than a scenario wherein Osama might have entered a Catholic convent and confessed his sins to a Jesuit priest.

Here is a still from the low-resolution Osama bin Laden video. If only he'd spent all that money on nice recording equipment rather than a private jet. I mean, if you're going to hold the entire world hostage for the sum of one million dollars, it's nice to make the face of evil out. The Media unanimously supported the faked video with its even faker message, as you can imagine. It even landed him on the cover of Newsweek, complete with an article titled: “WHAT CAN BE DONE TO REFORM THE ARAB WORLD”. If I had to guess, it would involve bringing in the Jooish bankers, but it’s best not to stick my nose where it doesn’t belong. Look where that landed Osama.

Speaking of noses, did Osama bin Laden get a nose job in the Dubai hospital along with the liver and kidney treatment? Must have gone for the total package. He even afforded a darker skin tone, perhaps to make up for how light Michael Jackson had become by 2001. Another reason why he could no longer afford the nice recording equipment, I’m sure. Even his beard is fuller than the person he pretends to be. Would you like this spelled out for you? The man in the video is an actor. A raise of hands from anybody who believes that is legitimately Osama bin Laden. Anyone. No? Alrighty, then. Tell me again that Intel isn’t outright lying to us and then explain how the Media, including Hollywood, isn’t in on it. All I managed to do was lineup Osama’s face with Osama. Are you telling me nobody else down at The New York Times or The Washington Post was capable of doing that?

See, this is what happens when you lay it on thick, telling it like it is, that the Joos are running things. They demolish buildings and then blame you for it. Can you do me a favor? When the Zionists start making fake videos with me in it, can you at least check to see if I've been given a nose job? Thanks, that would be appreciated.

February 11, 2003 [edit]

Colin Powell told a United States Senate panel that he'd reviewed a transcript of a message from bin Laden stating that he was in "a partnership with Iraq", which was to be broadcast on al Jazeera.^[11] Al Jazeera initially said they did not have the tape, but then said they received it the same day and broadcast it that evening at 8pm GMT. The quality of the recording was said to sound like bin Laden and to be "quite good" by The Guardian but "poor quality" by the BBC.^{[12][13]}

Try not to roll your eyes when coming to learn that Colin Powell reviewed his very own transcript. They might get stuck like that. Osama's latest confessional involves a partnership with Iraq. It was released or announced or whatever on February 11, 2003, arriving in even poorer quality than others. Al Jazeera initially claimed they did not have the tape, but then it suddenly arrived in their mailbox on the very day. If Osama was the one licking the stamps, it just goes to show that USPS is far more efficient than whatever mailing service they've got in Afghanistan.

Remember that speech to the United Nations where Colin Powell assured everyone that Saddam had built a fleet of phantom Russian trucks to produce anthrax? Yeab. Apparently, Colin Powell was assigned the part in the movie where all the dots are connected between Iraq and the Military Industrial complex. Do I even need to comment further on this one? I'm starting to get the impression that this Osama individual was in working perfect league with whatever the White House was cooking up in all those meetings.

Yet another bin Laden tape was released in October of 2004, landing just in time for the presidential election. The film that Al Jazeera broadcast in Qatar was highly blurred, as if that's not suspicious. Meanwhile in America, Osama's speech managed to hand the election over to Bush. Hmmm, it's almost like Osama was working with the Bush's out, but that can't be possible, right? Right!?

Have you watched the movie for yourself? It requires a magnifying glass. Osama has made the rather odd decision to trade in his military camouflage for a Saudi cloak. He's clearly a stand-in actor. He didn't even take the time to memorize his script. He just sits there turning the page without a lick of passion, and there are obvious cuts in the recording. And another thing, the real Osama was left-handed. Who is this fellow, so animated with his right hand? Not even their noses match up.

I'll let you read the transcript for yourself. If you choose to go that route, and you should, then you'll want to take note of a few oddities. First, there is Osama's quip regarding George W. on the morning of 9/11 and the children's story about the goat. Apparently, Osama had taken the time to review Fahrenheit 9/11 and had become a fan of Michael Moore's work. Far more importantly though, Osama rarely makes mention of Allah. That's not the Osama bin Laden whom I've come to know. I counted only 2 instances when Allah is invoked when in fact he should have been mentioned at least once every few sentences. Next, there is bin Laden's claim that he had been planning 9/11 for decades. He even gives a year. 1982. Rather strange, since he was a CIA agent then and going by the name of Tim Osman, as you well know by now. And anyways, the insane amount of predictive programming has demonstrated this to be true, but only partially. Intel didn't suspect we would see the underlying honesty in their own confession. In fact, they had probably planned to destroy the Twin Towers much earlier. Perhaps even at their construction, if not earlier still.

The final bin Laden video was released on September 11, 2007. So nice of him to remember the anniversary of the demolition. The eyes though. The way they drift to and fro. Never trust a man with shifty eyes. Once again, I'll go ahead and ask. Does that even look like Osama bin Laden to you? Not even close. This is what I was telling you about earlier regarding 'The Curious Case of Benjamin Button'. Ditching the hospital has done wonders for him. He's younger. Now that I think about it though, even Elvis-impersonators ditch the fat suit for a youthful look now and then. Three separate videos landed three different actors, each with their own unique spin on the Al Qaeda speech writer. You figure whoever they found was going for the Russian fighter look, but even still the beard doesn't match.

Who is this man? I don't haven't the faintest clue. Emmanuel Goldstein maybe, or some British actor. Perhaps even hanging out with buxom babes by the poolside between takes. All I know is, that's not Osama bin Laden. They're physicality is as different as their messages. In reality, there have been no sightings nor reports of Osama bin Laden since 2001. His legal entity died in 2001 and the character continued for another ten years. But that's not to say a legal entity is the same thing as a flesh and blood person.

The Death of Ayman al-Zawahiri by a US Drone Strike was a Hoax

[08/04/2022: GUESS whose ass the United States just blasted in Afghanistan? I wouldn't have the faintest clue. I'm asking you. Seriously, tell me if you know. The Pentagon may be claiming Ayman al-Zawahiri is their man, but exactly how gullible do they think we are? LOL. Do they think we're stupid? Wait, don't answer that. Elections are coming up, you know. And seeing as how the Biden Administration has been a disaster on every conceivable front (then again, it was designed to be), I guess somebody got desperate and decided to dust off a psyop from the George W. Bush playbook. Again, LOL. The world may be a motionless plane, but the Media headlines keep on spinning. Gravity may be another hoax but in the official narrative it waits for no one. So much for taking the afternoon off and going for a swim.

Ayman al-Zawahri, the Egyptian-born surgeon-turned-jihadist who assumed the leadership of Al Qaeda after the killing of Osama bin Laden and who died at 71 in a drone strike in Kabul, Afghanistan, over the weekend, according to U.S. officials, led a life of secrecy, betrayal, conspiracy and violence, most murderously in the Sept. 11 attacks against the United States in 2001.

While Bin Laden, who was killed by an American raid in 2011, was widely seen as the terrorist mastermind of those attacks, many counterterrorism experts considered al-Zawahri more responsible.

We are told in The New York Times how Ayman al-Zawahiri was an Egyptian-born surgeon-turned-jihadist who assumed the leadership of Al Qaeda after the killing of Osama bin Laden. Notice the after part. The NY Times goes on to remind everyone how Bin Laden was killed by an American raid in 2011. Well, thanks for that clarification. I was beginning to get confused, seeing as how I thought the Media had already let us in on the fact that Osama died in 2001 rather than 2011. But then it is days like this where I have to remind myself that we are still inhabiting The Matrix, where the Ministry of Truth runs everything. Otherwise, I might begin to wonder who assumed leadership between those intervening years, 2001 and 2011 that is.

But why do that? Why even attempt to make logic out of a movie whose inconsistencies are so noticeable that our world leaders could fly their hundreds of private jets through its plot holes on the way to their next global warming Climate Summit? Our Controllers have no choice but to continue regurgitating the same laughable lie over and over again in hopes that nobody notices, or else risk exposing everything. We have been through this already with the Osama bin Laden tapes, and so, you are about to see firsthand how very gullible the Obelisk people think we are.

TERROR CHIEF ‘DEAD’ Ayman al-Zawahiri ‘dead’ – Al-Qaeda boss dies from asthma in Afghan mountain hideout, reports claim

Henry Holloway

7:23 ET, Nov 20 2020 | Updated: 8:10 ET, Nov 20 2020

It only took me a minute to look this up. Less than a minute, actually. That’s how easy it is to fact check the Ministry of Truth. Type ‘Ayman al-Zawahiri dead’ into the search engine and adjust the date to anything earlier than 2022. On November 20, 2020, The Sun reported the death of Ayman al-Zawahiri. Nobody blasted his ass. He died of asthma. I’m not reading anything in that headline about a drone strike. Lame. Anybody who actually knew the guy is looking at the US Propaganda Machine right now and shaking their head. If you ever wondered why the simple-minded and ignorant desert peasants are so skeptical of our Imperial storm troopers landing in their backyard to force feed them a dosage of freedom or else, then here is your first clue. Lies such as this one.

Al-Qaeda's leader, rumored dead, appears in video for 9/11 anniversary

Ayman al-Zawahiri speaks of 'Judaization of Jerusalem,' mentions US withdrawal from Afghanistan, but not Taliban takeover – suggesting footage may not be recent

Another article that popped right up derives from The Times of Israel. You can see that it is dated to September 12, 2021. Seems like Intel needed to nip the al-Zawahiri is dead rumor in the bud with the release of a new Al-Qaeda video. Purporting to celebrate the 20th anniversary of September 11 was a nice way of playing our heart strings. It featured al-Zawahiri, but even The Times admits the video footage wasn't recent. He mentions the US withdraw from Afghanistan, but that began happening on February 29, 2020, some 8 or 9 months before his death. They even start the article out letting you know there is no validity to the claim that he is still alive. If he were, then he would have spoken on something more recent. Yes, that is how truly lame the blood thirsty terrorist organization ~~the CIA~~ Al-Qaeda truly is. They can't manage to release the vast majority of their movies from their jihadist leaders while they yet live. How and why does this keep happening? You and I know the answer to that one.]
