

The Epistle of Apollos

Edited by Noel Joshua Hadley

Apollos to Hierasthenes, greeting:

¹ Touching the matter whereby you did inquire in your last cepher, I will inform you even as I have received. I, Apollos, was in my house in Nazareth after the Holy City had been taken by the Romans, and the Temple of ALAHAYAM was destroyed, even as YAHUAHA had told us.

² And as the sun went down and I was resting from my work, ³ and Agella spoke to me saying, Brother, why grieve you for me, and for the fall of Yerushalayim and for the Qodesh House. Grieve rather that you were left behind when we with others of the brethren who were ready were taken up from the earth.

⁴ For when the city was sorely besieged and the battle was the fiercest and the confusion great and terrible, there was seen by all a great wonder in the heavens.

⁵ For YAHUAHA himself appeared from the clouds with her to whom he first appeared after he rose from the dead, who announced his resurrection to the twelve, and the qudash angels, according to the word that he Spake unto us while he was in the flesh.

⁶ And we who sore longed for deliverance and were ready for his appearance were caught up to him in the clouds with Yochanon, who alone of the twelve remained (whether in the body or out of the body I knew not).

⁸ Farewell brother, and go and comfort those that are left, for there will arise those who will deny that he returned as he said, because none of those who saw his appearance are left behind to witness thereof.

⁹ But believe you that the Mashiach shall return again at the end of the Age in glory.

¹⁰ And I arose and went to some of the brethren and told them these things, but they seemed to them as an idle tale, for they answered, If your sister and the others were taken, why have we been left behind in the misery of this world? Surely, they have fallen by the sword also, and it was a vision, and we, which are left behind, will perish likewise?

¹¹ And I returned to my home and held my shalom, for I was in doubt, and said, If the thing is true, it will be brought to light in a future day, for YAHUAHA certainly did say that “before this generation should pass away all these things should be,” even as my sister has told me they have been.

¹² They, who are with me, salute you. Shalom be with you, and to all in your house.
